It Does Not Pay to Deceive.

We tell no tales about great discoveries made in wonderful ways; we simply make this statement; * That there are no such discoveries or discoverers that are not known to the medical men all over the world. We offer you the most successful compounds that have come to our knowledge. We have submitted them to the most successful physicians we could find, and they agree with us that it is not always necessary to call a doctor because you do not feel well. Good remedies like our St. Jacobs Oil, Hamburg Drops, Breast Tea and Plaster, Dr. Worthington's Cholera and Diarrhoea Medicine, and Diamond Vera-Cura, for Indigestion and all disorders of the stomach will certainly cure. Some one has said that we are born to die. So we are, but not in the sense generally taken. Did we all live regular lives, upon plain, simple food and drink, we would live to old age and die at last simply by the ripeness and fullness of our years, as the leaves fall from the trees. It would not stand to reason, human-kind could go on and break all nature's laws, by overcrowding the system with rich food and drink at improper times, without paying the penalty. To the temperate man and woman we offer remedies which will surely regulate the system. We cannot always guard against sickness, but we can, by the use of good medicines, like our remedies, help ourselves back to health.

UNDOUBTED TESTIMONY.

Campbell, Inverness Co., N. S.,

GENTLEMEN— Jan. 3, 1889.

I have used St. Jacobs Oil for Rheumatism, and I think there is nothing better.

HUGH CAMPBELL.

Kincaid St., Brockville, Ont.,

GENTLEMEN— Jan 11, 1889.

You ask my opinion of St. Jacobs Oil. I was confined to my bed by a severe attack of lumbago. A lady friend of mine sent me part of a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which I applied. The effect was simply magical. In a day I was able to go about my household duties.

I have also used it, with splendid success, for neuralgic toothache. I would not be without it.

MRS. J. RINGLAND.

St. Cyrille de Wendover, P. Q.,

GENTLEMEN— Jan. 7, 1889.

This is to certify that I have used a box of "Diamond Vera Cura", your remedy for Dyspepsia, and it has done me more good than any remedy that I have ever tried for indigestion. It is also a magnificent substitute for tobacco.

GENTLEMEN— Jan. 3, 1889.

I recommend Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Plaster for cuts and wounds. I have used it, and find it without an equal. L.J.B. BRASSARD.

OUR LEASE ON LIFE.

We Ought to Live Three Score and Ten years.

To show you that the all-wise Creator intended mankind to live out his allotted time, three score and ten years, give us your attention for a few moments. In the first place God created the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that in them is; the dry land and all thereon. All this was intended for man whom he created last. Now the land which was made for man's use is but sparsely peopled, not more than one-thousandth part being cultivated, while it has been shown that one mile of land properly cultivated, will sustain one thousand human beings. This being the case, why is it that there are less than one thousand millions of people in the world. The answer is obvious. By our evil passions we go to war, and kill a great many. By breaking nature's laws, we kill ourselves, and more than all, by neglecting the warning which nature always gives at the approach of disease, to take medicine which will ward it off.

To show what can be done with one acre of land by those who understand its cultivation, let us illustrate. A French gardener, who had one acre of land, and was an intelligent man, made a study of the chemistry of his land (for the soil is either made up of loam or fertilizers, and is purely a chemical product.) He found also the chemical component parts of the vegetables he intended to raise. What his land did not have, he supplied artificially. He covered his acre with a glass roof, and ran pipes under the ground, supplied with steam from a small boiler, which gave the necessary warmth, and his roof being movable, he could let in the rain, and when too dry, he irrigated it by artificial means. His land, which at first was barren, in two years time produced more crops than any of our farmers get from one hundred acres. Besides this, after the first two years, his soil, by reason of his added fertilizers, increased so that every year he had considerable soil to sell. Many gardeners in France will start a garden on earth as barren as an asphalt pavement, and in a few years will make it a blooming and luxuriant spot. All this requires labor, without which, however, nothing of value can be obtained in any direction. There are many small tenement farmers in Ireland, who with the aid of their families, carry the soil to cover a barren rock, and in a few years will produce a good crop. In the old country, there are few large farms as compared with those of this country, and many farmers are rich with two acres. But then nothing goes to waste. Everything which will enrich the soil is carefully saved and added. There is one English gardener, whose experience we have before us as we write, who produced and sold from one acre of land, $5,000.00 worth of mushrooms. In view of these capabilities of the earth, when man obeys the Divine command, "in the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread," is it not evident that our Creator does not bring into the world three score souls to every adult death, that they should perish. It would be monstrous to believe that God brings so many infants into the world to die before maturity, as do two-thirds of all that are born. No, He intends every soul born to live the allotted three score and ten years; and were it not for the evils which human kind bring upon themselves, and their progeny, the world would be fully inhabited.

Readers, ponder upon these facts; live sober, moral lives, and when by reason of inherited weakness, entailed disease, or by your own mistakes, you find yourself overcome by disease, take proper medicine and exercise to assist nature to assert herself.

We offer you such remedies in our St. Jacobs Oil,* Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops, Dr. August Koenig's Breast Tea, Dr. Worthington's Cholera and Diarrhoea Medicine, and Diamond Vera Cura for Dyspepsia.

There are many persons who think when they see a medicine advertised, that it is some quack remedy, made only to sell. Now suppose it is made only to sell, would any person in his right mind, expend large sums of money in advertising a poor remedy, when people cannot be deceived but once. No, reader, the very fact that a large amount of money is being expended upon any medicine, is almost absolute proof that that medicine is the best that can be found. Self-interest will not allow any man to risk his money upon a remedy that will not do all that is claimed for it. St. Jacobs Oil for Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Burns, Swellings, Cuts, Bruises, and all mechanical injuries of like nature; Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops for diseases of the Blood and Liver; Dr. August Koenig's Breast Tea for the cure of coughs, colds, etc.; Dr. Worthington's Cholera and Diarrhoea Medicine, and Diamond Vera Cura for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, are the best and most scientific medicines that can be found. If anything better could be had, you may rest assured we would have it. These medicines are the result of the best skill and experience of the most eminent physicians and surgeons in the world. We have expended many hundreds of thousands of dollars in compounding these remedies; and our friends who use them, obtain gratuitously the skill which we have paid for, and the remedies themselves they obtain for one-tenth of the price they would have to pay to any druggist.

No friends, get rid of the idea that advertised medicines are quack medicines. Why many of our best physicians are using them in their private practice, because they cannot procure pure drugs in small quantities.

Reader, your grocer may sand his sugar, your merchant sell you damaged goods, but we cannot afford to risk our money on any but the very best medicines we can procure.

We hope you will read the testimonials published herein. You will find them from the most respectable people of all classes, and we place great reliance upon their statements to gain your confidence. We always verify our testimonials. We have many thousands on file at our Parent House, Baltimore, Md., and at our branch houses in San Francisco, Cal., Brockville, Ont., London, Eng., Melbourne, Victoria, Sydney, New South Wales, and Paris, France.

To the wise man the mistakes of the past become the beacon light of the future. But all men are not wise, or there would be little for the doctors to do. We all know that we cannot break the laws of nature with impunity, and yet we go on breaking them, never thinking of the consequences. The drafts we make on our strength and vitality in youth, we must pay in middle or old age. Such drafts are generally payable 30 years from date. By keeping late hours; by eating and drinking at improper times; by all the excesses of youth whereby we violate the laws of health we must inevitably pay with disease of some kind. Fortunately, however, we may, through the knowledge and skill of those versed in science, often cure, and always alleviate disease. To cure, the disease must be taken in hand on its inception. If you will read our little pamphlet you cannot help being convinced of the virtue of our remedies. With the exception of such diseases as cancer etc., which are incurable, there is not one but which our remedies will often cure, and as we said before, always palliate. There is an old proverb which says "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." If you would avoid cancer and kindred diseases, keep your blood in order.

That all diseases spring from the blood is an established fact. Our life, strength and health, depend on this vital fluid. When the various passages become clogged, the blood loses its action, becomes thick, corrupted and impure. The liver is the largest and one of the most important glands in the body; the kidneys are also of vital importance. When the blood is impure and corrupted, the liver and kidneys become diseased, and no longer perform their functions.

The liver which is a depurative gland when healthy, removes from the blood many impurities existing in the blood, and what remains in the blood is carbon, which is oxydized by the lungs during respiration.

Most of the organic diseases of the liver are incurable, but the functional diseases can be cured by proper treatment. The liver, exercising important functions, is more apt than any other, to become diseased. The diseases of the liver are of two kinds, organic and functional. The organic diseases are hypatrophly, or an overgrowth of the liver; atrophy, or a diminution of the natural size; induration, or an increase of density and hardness; softening, when the liver becomes soft and friable; cirrhosis consists in the development upon the surface, or through the substance of the liver, of innumerable nodules of various sizes; fatty liver is the adipose degeneration of the liver tubacles, these are deposited in the liver, as in the lungs; malignant affections, such as scirrhus (hard cancer,) medullary carcinoma (soft cancer,) and melanosis.

The liver is also liable to inflammation, both acute and chronic, particularly during hot weather, and in hot climates. Functional diseases of the liver are all derangements of the nervous circulatory or secretory process. Neuralgia is the only nervous disease known to effect the liver.

A large portion of the American people are to-day wearing out a miserable and unsatisfactory life, from the effects of Dyspepsia. Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Paralysis, Mental Derangement, Consumption, Heart Disease, Apoplexy, and in fact, almost every disease surrounding us to-day, is brought on by deranged stomach and liver. With these two organs healthy, man's happiness would be complete, as far as this world is concerned, and 75 per cent. of deaths would be avoided. We should watch carefully these two organs, read and study all reliable information connected with them, and be prepared to check all premonitory symptoms of their chronic diseases, such as sour stomach, rising of food after eating, habitual costiveness, dizzy head, palpitation of the heart, sick headache, dyspeptic cough, nausea, or sick stomach, bad circulation, nervous derangement, chills, coated tongue, heavy load at pit of stomach, confused mind, etc., etc., all depending upon a healthy liver and good digestion.

When your liver is out of order you do not want to move about, you feel lazy (lassitude is a better term) you feel melancholy, you look at the dark side of everything, you are apprehensive of evil coming upon you, and are altogether miserable.

Try our medicines, and you will soon feel like another person. Your step will be elastic, your eyes bright, your conversation cheery, and you will take renewed interest in the world's affairs. Why will you suffer when relief can be so easily obtained.

Colic.

Colic is characterized by pain in the bowels, usually more or less paroxysmal in its character, associated with constipation, and occurring independently of inflammation, either of the intestines or peritoneal coat. The pain is remittent, although sometimes it is continuous and uniform. The patient is usually restless, sitting up in bed, or rising and walking about with his body bent and pressing his hands on his abdomen. The violence of the pain depresses all the vital functions temporarily, producing pallor of the skin, cold sweats, shrunken countenance, and a feeble pulse. When sudden in its attack, it may produce faintness, and even insensibility, and in infants convulsions. Along with pain and constriction, there is often vomiting, and if the disease is not originally associated with inflammation, that condition ensues in its course. Colic in the great majority of cases, yields readily to Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops, but sometimes the constriction persists, and the case assumes an alarming character, in spite of all that can be done. The vomiting becomes frequent, everything taken into the stomach is rejected, the action of the bowels is inverted, and feculent matter is discharged from the mouth. This is the closing stage of the severest form of Colic, and is often connected with mechanical obstruction. Although this state of the disease is desperate, patients have recovered, and hope should not be given up as long as life lasts. Colic has no fixed duration, sometimes terminating in a few hours, and again running on for two or three weeks.

The various forms of Colic are simple Colic, which is rarely fatal. Bilious Colic, which is caused by derangement of the biliary organ; Colic from Obstruction, which if not removed terminates fatally; Rheumatic Colic, from Rheumatism of the bowels; Neuralgia Colic, from Neuralgia of the bowels; and lead Colic, from lead poison.

TREATMENT:—Saturate flannel with St. Jacobs Oil, and apply to the stomach and give Hamburg Drops in frequent doses. If the patient complains of the St. Jacobs Oil burning, persuade him to stand it as long as possible, and when obliged to remove it, renew it as soon as the patient can stand another application.

The reason we lay such stress upon keeping the blood pure and healthy, we will try to make plain to your understanding. All the fluids of the body are derived from the blood, with the exception of chyle and lymph. These two fluids enter directly into the constitution of the blood, therefore the blood must be looked to for any diseased condition of the other fluids of the body, such as Bile, Urine, etc., for if these fluids are not healthy, it is owing to the diseased condition of the blood. We speak of the formation of such fluids as are derived from the blood, for after a healthy formation, they may become diseased by a too long retention in the system. It is, therefore of the utmost importance to attend to nature's calls, and eliminate all noxious and corrupt matters, which not only are not needed, but become of vast injury to the different organs which are nourished by the blood. Many such poisons prove fatal by entering into the circulation by means of absorption, and are carried to all the vital organs to the destruction of their tissue. The fetid contents of the bowels, the urine, and the bile, are often taken up by the veins or absorbents, and thus find their way into the circulation. A source of the vitiation of the blood is the existence of certain principles, which, in their normal conditions, are necessary to health, but if too long retained, and are not drawn off by the excretory functions, become poisonous; thus uric acid exists in the blood unperceived in its healthy state, but if not drawn off by the kidneys, it is deposited in the joints and Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia result. Those persons whose diet is rich and food stimulating, but who do not take sufficient exercise to work it out of the system, get their blood so thoroughly charged with stimulant properties, that it is an actual state of disease; again, a meagre diet produces the opposite state; the blood is deficient in solid constituents, and the proportion of liquid is excessive. An excess of albumen or fibrin in the blood is equally pernicious, and sure to bring on disease. An excess of salts and fatty matter, or a deficiency of the same corrupt the blood. If the lungs imperfectly oxygenate the blood, it is not fit for the purpose of life, as it is well known that the blood from the veins, or venous blood, must be changed in the lungs by respiration, and thus oxydizing it and turning it into arterial blood, which then flows to the heart, and that organ pumps it to the extremities of the body, thus giving the body warmth, and repairing all waste of tissue. Thus the river of life, which is the blood, flows throughout the body to all its organs, and having accomplished its mission, returns to the lungs through the veins, gathering on its way the lymph and chyle, converting it into blood by the various organs purified by them; and all useless matter separated to be cast out of the body, and again in the lungs to undergo the same change from venous to arterial blood.

As all the fluids of the body are derived from the blood except chyle and lymph, which enter into the blood, you will readily perceive the necessity of keeping the blood pure, so that all deleterious matter may be separated from it, and pass off by the proper channels.

The blood being composed of both red and white corpuscles, if one exist in undue proportion over the other, disease is a certain result, and it is of the utmost importance that this stream of life be perfectly pure, so as to maintain the due proportion of white to red corpuscles.

It is an old saying that if the spring be pure the stream will be clear. Corrupt the source and the stream will be foul. Too much stress cannot be laid on this subject, for if this vital fluid be neglected, all manner of unwholesome humors will be carried to all parts of the body, and its various organs will become diseased. Nature herself will cry aloud by warnings unmistakable. Pain, languor, evil apprehensions, all are warnings to us to set our house in order, for our body is the house in which we live. If we would save large doctor's fees, days of anguish, and loss of time from business, take the proper remedy, and assist nature to perform the cure. There is nothing so good as Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Remedies for this purpose. Read our testimonials, and enclose a stamp to the parties for a reply.

Irritation of the Stomach.

Whatever irritates the mucous coat of the stomach may throw the whole muscular system into spasms. This is frequently caused by indigestible food, such as boiled cabbage, cucumbers, lobsters etc., or other substances which disagree with the stomach by reason of any peculiar idiosyncrasy, and by other irritating matters, whether the result of alteration of the food, or of secretion, as acid in excess, acrid gastric juice and bile. The occurrence of nausea spasms, or an abortive effort to vomit, will serve to indicate the nature or cause. Another cause of irritation is a collection of air, resulting either from the fermentation of food, or from some secretory act of the stomach. There is no remedy better to correct these conditions of the stomach than Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops. You should take the Hamburg Drops on the first indication of any of these troubles, and when you begin to feel better, be careful in your diet, eating nothing but food that will easily assimilate. Remember we are describing to you the original causes of serious disease, and if you will bear in mind what we say, you can avert an attack which may prove fatal.

Why will people drag out a miserable wretched existence, when by taking a good medicine like Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops, they can feel well, and enjoy life. Is it procrastination? Or is it because they are afraid the medicine will physic them, and put them to inconvenience, or what is it that causes people to put off taking medicine until down sick, and they are obliged to quit business and go to bed ? The human body is so constituted that if any organ is threatened by disease, immediate warning is given. If that warning be unheeded, the organ becomes diseased and like a piece of machinery, out of repair, which if it continues to be run, is soon destroyed altogether. In the human body all its organic parts are intimately connected, and dependent upon each other. The body of mankind is a wonderful piece of mechanism. The heart is literally an engine, the most powerful of any known. It requires heat to make it run. This heat is generated in the lungs by the oxydizing of the blood during our breathing. To obtain heat requires fuel, and this is the food we take into our stomach, which we may aptly term the fire box. To convert our food into the necessary liquids and solids, which are the blood, bone, muscles, etc., there are several organs which do the work. There are the assimilating nerves which take up such portions of the food as are necessary to sustain life. The liver which secretes bile, sends parts of the digested food to generate heat in the lungs while the bowels carry off the useless parts. The kidneys may be termed a filter to carry off the liquid impurities of the blood. The head may be termed the office of the body wherein is the director of all this wonderful machinery, the brain. From the head, run to all parts of the body, telegraph wires, (the nerves,) by which the brain is notified if all parts of the body are working in unison, and each organ is properly performing its duty. Let any of these organs get out of order, and the brain is immediately notified of the fact that repair is needed. Now, if any of our readers owned an insignificant machine, he would, if it needed repair, at once have the repairs made. But how little do we all realize that each of us is in possession of the most wonderful and intricate machine ever created, whose delicacy of parts are inimitable, and yet whose strength is unrivalled. This is but a crude description of the most important parts of our body, and yet if we would keep this simile in our minds, we would not so often neglect ourselves when we need repair. Remember every organ of your body is in ceaseless activity until death stops the whole machine. This death or stoppage of the machine occurs in different ways ; sometimes of heart failure, sometimes it begins in the brain ; sometimes in other of the organs. How vitally necessary then for us to take a medicine which will reach the affected part, and put it in healthful order.

Neuralgia.

This excruciating disease is kin to Rheumatism, and should be called Rheumatism of the nerves. It is superinduced by exposure, excessive use of tobacco, spinal complaints; and a great variety of irregularities. Some people affected by Neuralgia, suffer such acute pain as to lose their minds. The pain is lancinating, cutting like a knife. It is at times unendurable, as the opening of a door, the stirring of a handkerchief, will bring on spasms of torturing pain. On first applying St. Jacobs Oil, the nerves are so tender that the slightest touch will extort agonizing groans, but after thoroughly bathing the afflicted part, the pain gradually subsides, and the patient falls asleep.

Persons afflicted with Neuralgia should rub themselves with St. Jacobs Oil every night on going to bed, to prevent a recurrence of the attack.

For Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bruises, Frost Bites, Toothache, and the numerous kindred ailments, there can be nothing better than St. Jacobs Oil. For horses, cows, sheep and hogs we have numerous testimonials of the great benefit received. By all means read our testimonials. They are from all classes of people, and every one has been verified.

Rheumatism

Is not only a painful but a dangerous disease. It springs from many sources, and with its kindred diseases is hydra-headed. Biliousness is a frequent cause of this complaint, and Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops is a very useful medicine to cleanse and regulate the liver. You should take it three times a day after meals until you feel bright and vigorous. Bathe yourself frequently with St. Jacobs Oil, take light exercise, and our word for it, your Rheumatism will be cured in a few days. Again Uric Acid in the blood will cause most painful Rheumatism. The same course pursued in this as in all other cases of Rheumatism positively effect a cure.

Rheumatism may be divided into Acute, in which violent local inflammation is attended by considerable constitutional disturbances and fever; sub-Acute in which the inflammation is less violent, and there is little or no fever; chronic, characterized by long duration and the lowest grade of inflammatory action, and nervous, in which there is neither inflammation nor fever, the disease consisting exclusively in irritation, and that directed specially to the nervous tissue.

In the great majority of cases, this disease first shows itself in the extremities, and usually in the lower. The disease may be confined to a single joint, or a part, or a whole limb, but more frequently it affects several limbs, and different portions of the trunk, jointly or successively; and occasionally it involves the whole body.

To cure this distressing disease, bathe thoroughly with St. Jacobs Oil, and bandage the parts with red flannel. Keep the bowels open by taking Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops, and you will find immediate relief. Continue the treatment some time after you are apparently well, in order to thoroughly eradicate all germs of the disease.

What Fools These Mortals be.

Shakespeare never wrote words more true. We pride ourselves on the marvellous work mankind has achieved, and truly it is wonderful. But while doing work worthy the subjects of a higher sphere, we take little or no cognizance of nature's laws governing our own bodies.

Again we have heard intelligent men speak of proprietary medicines as quack medicines, concocted only to sell and gull the public. To be sure St. Jacobs Oil, Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Remedies, Dr. Worthington's Cholera and Diarrhoea Medicine, and Diamond Vera Cura are made to sell, but had they not been made to cure also, the sale would not be large. No, friends, do not take stock in such talk. Would we not be fools to invest our money in a medicine we did not know would absolutely do all we claim for it; it would not pay us to deceive you, and besides read our testimonials. Did you ever see better ones, or from better people. We will substantiate every testimonial we publish or keep on file, and we have many thousands of them from all parts of the world.

* In offering this pamphlet for your perusal, we hope to accomplish a twofold purpose. In the first place, we offer you the knowledge of many of the diseases common to humanity, their symptoms, causes and treatment. And secondly, we wish to call your attention to our remedies. That we are actuated by motives of self interest, we do not deny; if we did, you might set us down as frauds. We know that there are many persons who advertise most wonderful things to cure all diseases, and claim their only purpose is to benefit their fellow creatures. Now, we do business to make money; we have remedies of great value, for which we have expended a great deal of money to obtain the best skill and experience of the most celebrated physicians and chemists, and we must have a proper remuneration for our outlay. There is nothing inconsistent in this with honesty. Indeed, we consider that in order to make money, we must of necessity be honest men. We must give you value received for your money, and we make this plain statement, and leave to your own good sense to judge whether or not we are honest, truthful men. We have something of value to you; if you are sick, of inestimable value; if in health, still of value as a preventative of sickness. As we have paid eminent talent for our remedies, we thus save you doctors' fees. By manufacturing our medicines in large quantities, we are enabled to sell them to you for less than one quarter of what you would have to pay a druggist, even if you had the recipe.

We make no claims that our remedies will raise the dead, for we are born to die. We do not claim to have made any great discovery, for there is nothing in the science of medicine that is not known to our scientific men. We do claim, however, to have obtained the best results of modern science, and we offer you our remedies, with the confidence that comes from long experience, not only of ourselves, but of our fellowmen everywhere, whose testimonials we publish herein. We ask you earnestly to read these testimonials; they are from the best known and most eminent people in all walks of life.

We often hear it said that we will not die till our time comes, but no person really believes in this oft repeated saying. If so, why do we take medicine when we are sick. No, reader, God has given man's age as three score and ten years, and he intends that we shall live the allotted time, and fall in death by the ripeness of our years, as the leaves in autumn. It is through our own, or our parents indiscretion that sickness and premature death is entailed upon us. The greatest enemy to health is health itself. The person in robust health takes no note of nature's laws, but violates them at every turn, gratifying himself by eating and drinking at unseasonable hours, indulging in excitement and exposure, and in fact, tempting the arch destroyer at all times.

He feels that he has nothing in common with those who are delicate and sickly. It is not to the swift nor the strong that the race is given, and it is more often the strong and robust in health who do not obtain their full years. It is within the observation of all of us that the delicate ones, who, familiar with sickness, are obliged to take care of themselves, and live quiet, sober lives, live their allotted days. All the advice that science can give will not avail with some people, and yet we give advice just the same, and if we can prevail with but few, our labor is not in vain. It is an axiom in logic that all evil is but virtue exaggerated, thus ambition is a virtue, its excess a sin; economy a virtue, miserliness a sin; liberality a virtue, squandering a sin; and curiosity within limits is one of the cardinal virtues. Without this latter virtue, where would we be at this day? Sunk in ignorance. All our great inventions, all our progress is due to curiosity and ambition. The latter which prompts us to make wealth, and the former which prompts us to investigate. The doctor and the chemist have had the curiosity to examine our bodies, and thus they, by long labor, surrounded by ghastly scenes, have obtained the knowledge whereby we are enabled to restore ourselves to health when attacked by disease.

Have you ever been in a dissecting room, if not, come with us. We ascend several flights of stairs in the dark, until we arrive at the top floor. Passing through a couple of doors we enter a large room flooded with light. All is animation among the 25 or 30 students; some holding an argument, others joking and laughing, whistling and singing. About the room are many iron tables with slender legs to prevent climbing. On these tables are human bodies in various stages of mutilation. On one an arm, another a leg, another a human trunk, and here is one student with a human head. He has just sawed off the top and is carefully examining the brain. Here on a table is a fresh subject which the janitor is preparing for dissection; watch him as he shaves the hair from the head and eyebrows, for the subject must be free from hair. Is this not a ghastly scene? One you will never forget? And yet here are the men of the future, those whom you will rely on to ease your pain, cool your fevered brow, and bring you back to health. Ghastly as is the scene in a dissecting room, and horrible as is the work, yet it is necessary for preparing the men for one of the most self-sacrificing professions in the world. The doctor never has a moment to call his own. He may be at the festive gathering, or in the stormy night by his own cosy fireside, but he is liable to be called to a scene of suffering and death, at any moment.

Toothache.

While toothache is not a fatal disease, it is of such common occurrence, and of such intimate relation to the comfort of all who are afflicted with it, that we give space to describe the different causes.

In Toothache, a common neuralgic condition is often the cause while the teeth are perfectly sound. The affection may be seated in the nerve of a single tooth, but it much more commonly occupies the nervous trunk, from which several teeth are supplied. The pain is, in general, of an acute character, sometimes mild in the beginning, and increasing in its intensity, but it is usually irregular, at one time moderate, at another severe, darting with excruciating violence through the dental arches.

The cause sometimes is very difficult to determine, especially when it occurs in sound teeth. It is, however, generally dependent upon a morbid state of the nervous system, such as disposes to neuralgic pain, or is in sympathy with some morbid condition of the stomach. No matter what the cause, St. Jacobs Oil will instantly relieve the pain.

Irritation and Inflammation.

Many people would, at first thought, say that inflammation and irritation were the same thing, but there is an important difference between the two. Irritation is any morbid excitement of the vital actions not amounting to inflammation. It is produced by an excess of food, heat, cold, and acrid substances, and by matters extraneous to the body; if neglected it may advance to actual inflammation. Inflammation is characterized by extreme redness, heat, pain and swelling.

Inflammation is beyond all comparison the most important of diseased conditions, as it either attends, or forms an essential part of the great majority of serious diseases, and in many cases, constitutes the chief source of danger. The pain varies much, being sometimes very slight, and at other times exquisitely severe.

Inflammation destroys the tissue in which it exists, and pus is formed, which latter is the effort of nature to repair the injury. This pus, if healthy, is marked by whitish yellow, or slightly greenish color, and is about the consistency of cream; if unhealthy, it is mixed with blood, and is exceedingly offensive. If inflammation be on the surface before pus is formed, use St. Jacobs Oil to stop its progress, which it will do every time.

It is a well known fact that if we do not make use of our limbs and muscles, they will wither, and become in time, entirely useless. There is another fact not so generally known, and that is, if we are born with a weakness in any of our organs, we can by judicious exercise of that organ develop it to its natural size, and render it healthy and useful. For instance, the celebrated strong man, Dr. Winship, was born with weak lungs and a tendency to consumption. He was far from being a large man but by judicious training he was enabled to lift the enormous weight of 2,700 lbs, a feat never equalled since the days of Samson.

If you will carefully read our testimonials, you will find that all our celebrated athletes and oarsmen use St. Jacobs Oil while training, not only to strengthen their muscles and limber their joints, but after the severe exercise which they must take to increase their power of endurance, they have their whole bodies rubbed down with St. Jacobs Oil. It gives them restful ease, and they feel as fresh and energetic as before their exercise. Try it, and you will find your strength increase day by day. You no longer will have that tired feeling after a hard day's work, which makes you averse to action. There can be no doubt that St. Jacobs Oil is the best remedy for renewing your strength and activity.

An important point to be observed if you wish to obtain healthful results from exercise, is to carefully note the number of respirations of your lungs, note the number of your pulse beats to the minute, and if you find them immoderately increased, stop your exercise for the time being, bathe your body with St. Jacobs Oil, dress yourself and take a good walk in the open air. By steadily adhering to this plan you will be astonished to find how rapidly your strength will increase. In one short month you will be surprised to find the task which tired you in the beginning will not quicken your pulse one beat, and your respiration will be as regular as though you had not taken any exercise at all. By pursuing this plan methodically, you will find yourself in perfect health in a few months. Life will have a new zest for you. You will enjoy your food as only the healthful can. You will no longer find pleasure in idleness, you must be up and doing. Your time will be as money to you, and you will sleep the sleep of the just made perfect. Why will you delay taking our advice when such momentous results can be obtained.

Diseases from Mechanical and Chemical Causes.

An injury is not in itself a disease; it is the effect of the injury upon the tissue, and its results, that must be considered as disease. You make the same injury to a dead person without any after result; you may break the bones, or lacerate the flesh just the same as with a living body, but nothing further ensues. But the living body is subject to the laws of vitality, and an injury must be followed by disease more or less severe, according to the injury. Irritation is the first effect, which if not allayed, runs on to inflammation. The moment an injury is inflicted on a living body, nature sets to work to repair such injury, and if not serious, she will perform a cure without assistance. But in the more severe cases, she will require aid. As we can never tell what may be the result of the slightest injury, it is well to always keep good remedies on hand for immediate use. Every person should keep where they can instantly put their hand on it, a supply of St. Jacobs Oil. St. Jacobs Oil is a most wonderful remedy for wounds and cuts of all kinds, Burns, Bruises and all external injuries. It will instantly allay pain, and enter upon a curative process. In all the avocations of life, we are liable to injury. The farmer, the mechanic, the housekeeper, the man of leisure, all are liable to accident, and the wise person will be prepared for an emergency.

Whatever is capable of deranging any of the functions, or any part of the structure of the body, may properly be called causes of disease. Such causes are therefore exceedingly numerous. The simplest division of these causes is mechanical and chemical. There are many subdivisions such as predisposing and exciting causes (etc.) but they may all be resolved into the foregoing. A cause which is exciting in one case, may be predisposing in another. Cold may produce inflammation which is an exciting cause, or it may produce depression which is a predisposing cause.

The symptoms of disease are also too numerous to mention, but fortunately most of them are well known. To what particular disease the symptoms point, is often most difficult to tell, the symptoms of many diseases being alike. There is but one sure way to counteract any disease, and that is as soon as you do not feel well, take Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops, to thoroughly cleanse the system, and if complicated with a cold, take Dr. Aug. Koenig's Breast Tea. For pain of all kinds St. Jacobs Oil is the best remedy known.

The Reason.

The reason The Charles A. Vogeler Co.'s remedies are so popular with the public (for they are as staple as wheat) is that we have never deceived the people. In all our advertising we have never stated that which is not true; we always give our customers the worth of their money. We have never denied that self interest is the aim and motive of our life, and when you read the statements of those who pretend to do business purely on philanthropic motives, you may set them down as frauds. Self interest is the main spring of all mankind, and when not misguided, results in the greatest good. Self interest does not prevent a man from being honest; in fact, that man who best studies his own interest will never deceive his fellowmen. Honesty even as a mere policy is by far the best. It is self interest which has induced us to expend a large sum of money in procuring the best skill and experience that money could buy, and we may safely say that no better remedies exist than ours. If there did, we would buy them at once. We have many hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in these medicines, and we dare not peril our interest by putting a poor medicine on the market. We use great caution in procuring pure drugs, herbs and gums, and we would be foolish indeed to allow our medicines to fall below their present standard. The fact is, they sell on their merit. When once a person uses them, that person recommends them to his friends, and the large demand for them, is the best evidence of their superiority.

The stomach is most liable to get out of order. Hence how important that no diseased matter clog its operations, which would cause nausea and distress, by your food. It also weakens the brain, destroys the memory, creates pain and dizziness, and various afflictions in the head. It produces great difficulty in breathing and swallowing. Sometimes fainting and fits will ensue, also bad breath, restlessness, and great loss of strength. If not immediately attended to, the blood will carry the disease through the whole system, and death will end the work. Read this pamphlet, and use one of our remedies applicable to your complaint, and you will be restored to health.

Fevers.

Fever, like every other form of disease, is caused by impure humors; this being caused by a more rapid action of the blood struggling with nature in endeavoring to cast out of the body the corrupt matter which is deadly opposed to health. Hence the good and bad humors are at war with each other, and the commotion which follows, causes fever and heat. The symptoms of fever are various, causing heaviness, languor, difficult breathing, eyes dull and heavy, sighing and yawning, alternate fits of heat and cold, after which the patient complains of great thirst, nausea, a fulness about the stomach, and sometimes vomiting and biliousness.

The Bowels and Their Functions.

As perfect health is the greatest blessing that we can enjoy, and without which all other blessings are of little consequence, we deem it of great importance, to point out the way for you to enjoy it. The bowels must be kept in a state by which they are enabled to carry off the useless matter. They are the main channel by which nature has appointed to carry off everything that is unnecessary, and it is impossible to tell what a large amount of sickness has been caused by constipation or costiveness; in other words, not keeping the bowels regular.

If your sewer pipes in your house become clogged, you at once put them in order, because if stopped up, they would cause sickness. Yet you allow the sewer pipes of your own body to become clogged, and do not think of the damage they will do your health. It is a main road to disease; it is the cause of unnatural irritation to the mucous membrane or lining of the bowels. Having lost their natural strength, they cannot object to what is required of them; hence the bowels become inflated, and unless you find speedy relief, a thousand other complaints are ever ready to drag you through a miserable and wretched life. Such medicines must be given as will cleanse the stomach and bowels, and restore their natural strength. To accomplish this, there is no medicine like Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops.

The Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops will quickly cleanse the stomach and bowels from all bilious matter, open the excretory vessels, causing them to pour copious effusions from the blood into the bowels, after which the corrupted mass is thrown out of the body by the natural passage. All that is required in urgent cases of fever will be to take large doses, in order to have them operate on the bowels freely until the fever entirely disappears. #

ARE YOU HEALTHY.

Diseases viewed superficially appear to be exceedingly numerous and diversified, but when subject to analysis, are found to consist of comparatively few derangements, the combinations of which in various ways, in relation to number, seat and degree, cause such an apparently great number of diseases. These morbid conditions bear to diseases the same relations that the organic principles of bodies in nature bear to each other, the same for example, that sugar, starch, gum, etc., bear to the bark or root containing them. The causes of diseases are simple or elementary. The reason disease has not been successfully combatted, is because the healthful actions of the various fluids and solids of the human body have not been understood. Our bodies like our natures have two component parts, solids and fluids. Our natures are animal and spiritual. Since the advent of the microscope, it has been found that the great majority of diseases have their source in the blood. In the Bible you will find in Lev. XII., verses 12 and 14, these words: "The blood is the life of the flesh." The blood is made of chyle and lymph; the food on entering the stomach is attacked by the gastric juice, and converted into chyle. The absorbents take up this chyle, and convert it into the substances of the body, and so repair its waste. If the proper passages ordained to carry off the useless properties of chyle and lymph be obstructed, a portion of this corrupt matter may enter into the blood, and through the circulation of the blood be deposited in the various organs and thus cause disease. Now it is self evident that if you take a good medicine like Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops to physic the blood, this corruption, if taken in its inception, will be removed and the vital organs remain healthy. The kidneys play an important part in separating from the chyle, the urine or uric acid, and pass it out of the body. If the kidneys fail in their duty, uric acid is carried by the blood and deposited in the joints, thus causing those excessively painful diseases, Rheumatism and Gout. Another great cause of disease is cold, which by its depressing influence lessens the natural energy of the different fluids of the body. The liver secretes bile, which is a complex substance composed of water, acids, fatty bodies, mucous, salts and coloring matter. One part of the bile, in connection with the pancreatic juice, serves in the process of digestion to dissolve the fatty portions of the food, the other contains the hydrocarbonaceous portion of the effete matter of the blood,

FOR RHEUMATISM.

Relief in One Hour.

The "Father of Canadian Journalism," a title given to Col. Wylie from being the oldest editor in Canada, writes:

GENTLEMEN— Brockville, Ont., May 1888.

Four years ago I had a severe attack of Rheumatism. I could not stand on my feet. The pain was excruciating. I was blistered and purged in true orthodox style, but all to no purpose. I was advised to try St. Jacobs Oil, which I did, for a day or two without effect. At last I had my ankles well rubbed and then saturated two pieces of flannel with the remedy and had them wrapped around my ankles. In about an hour I began to feel a burning sensation which increased to such an extent that I was obliged to cry out to remove the bandages. The next morning I could walk across my bedroom without pain.  DAVID WYLIE.

formed by the waste of tissues, and is removed, as the nitrogenous portions are, by the kidneys.

The liver also possesses the power of assimilation, thus the albuminous portions of the food, after being absorbed into the blood from the stomach and bowels, are carried to the liver by the portal vein, where they undergo a change in the cells of the liver, changing the crude albumen into true blood albumen. It also acts on a part of the starchy portions of the food, and changes them into a substance called glycogen, which is carried to the lungs to generate heat by being oxydized during respiration. The liver also elaborates fatty matter for the generation of heat in the lungs.

The liver may be easily irritated through the depression caused by cold, the bile becomes unhealthy, and thus the blood becomes corrupted, involving the kidneys, lungs, heart and brain. This irritation may go on until fever and death supervene. How easy, if taken at the start, Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Drops will restore the liver to healthy action, and so avert such direful consequences.

There is much to be said of all predisposing causes to disease, which space forbids us to mention at length. We can only give you a general idea of these matters, as our little Symptoms of Disease.

The symptoms of disease are the signs which nature gives of the system being out of order. They are various and numerous, and in many different complaints confounding in their similarity. We will describe some of them.

THE PULSE :—The evidences of the pulse in disease are probably on the whole, the most important we can obtain ; but they are not without their fallacies, and much caution is necessary to avoid wrong inferences. For instance, frequency of the pulse must not be confounded with quickness, the latter has reference to the succession of pulsations, the former to each one separately. A frequent pulse is one in which the number of beats is greater than usual, and a quick pulse one in which the beat occupies less time than in health. In nervous disorders, the heart makes quick, angry contractions, and when there is inflammation, the pulse is prolonged and forcible. Intermissions of the pulse do not necessarily denote an interruption of the heart beats, for the heart may be so feeble that it does not force the pulsations to the extremities Irregularity of pulse may exist in persons quite healthy, and who live to old age. The pulse beats different also in different persons. Some, like the late Gen. Sheridan, may have a natural pulse of 100 to the minute, whereas the normal pulse is from 70 to 80 beats to the minute.

The tongue also gives us indications of the different disorders; thus a yellow tongue denotes biliousness, a brown tongue typhoid conditions, and a white tongue nervousness, an extremely red tongue denotes an unduly arterialized state of the blood. The red tongue can be considered as having reference to the stomach only when other symptoms point in that direction. A livid or purple tongue is usually dependent on insufficiently aerated blood, and is a valuable sign in connection with the lips.

The appetite may become depraved, and a temporary loss of it is common in all diseases, although the opposite may exist.

Thirst, nausea, and vomiting, are too well understood as symptoms to need more than mere mention.

The respiration or breathing when too frequent or slow, forcible or feeble, irregular wheezing, stertorous, spasmodic or convulsive, all denote disease.

The temperature of the body is an infallible sign of disease, and if it rise above 105 degrees denotes extreme danger.

Coughing may be either dry, hacking, short, violent, or spasmodic, and all denote a diseased state of the lungs, liver or heart. There are many other symptoms such as facial expression, delirium, pain, etc., but our limited space will not allow us to describe them. We wish to devote as much of our little book to such diseases as may, on their first inception, be cured by our remedies, without the aid of a doctor. Every family should keep a full line of our medicines in the house, so as to be ready at the first approach of disease to counteract it.

Many Diseases are Produced by very few Causes.

The constantly increasing demand, the universally favorable comments of the press, and the immense number of testimonials which are constantly being received from reliable parties in all parts of the country, prove conclusively that these remedies are regarded by countless thousands as the most valuable adjunct—as the silent family physician—who is ever at home, ever ready and always effective.

Many people ridicule a medicine which is advertised as a remedy for numerous diseases; those who do so are ignorant entirely of the cause of disease. These causes may most of them be traced to one source, and our theory upon the compounding of our remedies, is to reach and remove the common cause. To illustrate, we

A Farmer and His Wife Express Thankfulness.

Bedford, Ont., Dec. 10. 1888.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.,

GENTLEMEN—I suppose a word from a man and his wife so far back in the country, and a farmer at that, would be of no use to you, but I do want to say that we have both been afflicted for three or four years with heart burn and sour stomach, and have tried everything we could hear of, but found no relief.

About the last of September an old friend of ours, a minister, made us a visit, and gave us quite a good sized box of medicated gum that he said you called Diamond Vera Cura. We are cured of that awful heart burn and sour stomach, so we send you this to express our gratitude to you for having invented this simple cure, and give you liberty to use this testimonial as you please, so that it may lead some poor creature that suffers, to use your medicine. Yours respectfully, will enumerate such diseases as originate in the blood, and which can be cured, if there is no delay, by taking our medicines.

Consumption, Heart Disease, Liver Complaint, Kidney Diseases, Rheumatism, Skin Diseases, Gout, Neuralgia, Cancer, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, and many other complaints. We have in another place described how the blood, when it is vitiated, weakens and diseases the muscular and organic tissues, producing functional disorders, which if unchecked, run on until serious and dangerous trouble is engendered in the system. It seems incredible to us that people will allow the warnings of disease to pass unheeded. If they had any knowledge of their own bodies, we are sure they would take more care of them.

Gout.

There has been some difference of opinion as to whether Gout is a species of Rheumatism, or whether it is a distinct disease. It resembles Rheumatism in many of its symptoms, but differs from it in that the pain although paroxysmal, continues between the paroxysms. It also differs in that there is no disposition to attack the heart. As uric deposits are found in the joints, however, we must believe that the causes are the same and therefore the use of St. Jacobs Oil and Hamburg Drops are as beneficial in Gout as in Rheumatism.

There is a wide-spread superstition, cherished by the great majority of the people, that to sleep immediately after they have taken food is to endanger health, to favor the onset of apoplexy, etc., a superstition based on the assumption that during sleep the brain is normally congested. There is, no doubt, such a thing as congestive sleep, but during normal sleep the brain is anaemic. When a person has taken a fairly abundant lunch or dinner, the stomach demands a special influx of blood wherewith to accomplish its work of digestion ;
 no organ can more easily comply with that demand than the brain, which, when in full activity, is suffused with a maximum amount of the vital fluid. But a derivation of blood from the brain to the stomach can only take place, except in exceptionally full blooded and vigorous persons, on the condition that the cerebral functions be partially or wholly suspended. Hence many people after taking dinner feel indisposed for mental action and not a few long for sleep. The already partially anaemic brain would fain yield up to the stomach a still further supply of blood, and yield itself up to refreshing sleep. Doing so it gains new strength ; meanwhile digestion proceeds energetically ; and soon, body and mind are again equipped to continue in full force the battle of life. But superstition, the child of ignorance, intervenes, declares that sleep during digestion is dangerous, admonishes the would-be sleepers to struggle against their perilous inclination, and, though telling them that after dinner they may sit awhile, assures them of the adage, "After supper walk a mile."

The millions of its victims continue, therefore, the strife to which it condemns them, and ignore the suggestions offered to them by the lower animals, who have always practiced the lessons of sound physiology by sleeping after feeding whenever they are allowed to do so. Hence the human brain and human stomach of such victims contend with each other during the digestive process ; the brain, impelled by superstition, strives to work and demands blood to work with, while the stomach, stimulated by its contents, strives to carry on its marvelous chemistry, and demands an ample supply of blood for the purpose. The result of the struggle is that neither is able to do its work well ; the brain is enfeebled by being denied its natural rest during the digestive process, and the healthy function of the stomach degenerates into dyspepsia.

Are unequalled as a Blood-Purifier, and are a preventive of and a cure for the following and other diseases: Disorders of the stomach and kidneys, costiveness, depression of spirits dependent upon indigestion, bilious attacks, nausea, headache, liver complaint, dizziness and skin diseases, and other ailments. Also some types of female complaint; and if taken in time they will prevent all diseases arising from impure and impoverished blood, and from many other causes.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE—Some constitutions are more susceptible to the influence of medicine than others, rendering it quite impossible to state the exact dose for every case; but with a little attention, persons can readily adapt the dose to their special cases. An important aid in securing the best effect of the medicine is to take it at the exact time specified. As too violent purgation weakens the system, it is better in all cases to begin with small doses and gradually increase than take an overdose. This applies particularly to persons delicately or nervously constituted, especially to weak females. In case of chronic or confirmed diseases, it is often necessary to persist in its use for some time before the disease will entirely leave the system. Patients should eat nourishing, not stimulating food, and take moderate, not debilitating exercise. The proper time for taking the Drops is in the evening, before retiring; best taken on sugar, or in water, milk or syrup. For obstinate constipation, and bowel complaint a dose upon arising in the morning will be advisable. Dyspeptics and sufferers from Indigestion will experience much benefit from a small dose just before meals. Children teething and suffering with colic and costiveness, should be given the Drops several times through the day.

IMPORTANT—Dr. August Köenig's Hamburg Drops should not be taken in case of typhoid, scarlet and inflammatory fevers, small-pox, measles and other epidemic diseases, after such have actually made their appearance; nor in case of chronic dysentery, inflammatory costiveness, and where the bowels have been lacerated by ulcers, or the patient has suffered a severe loss of blood, or if the nervous system has been greatly irritated and weakened.

Dose—Children under one year, from 3 to 5 drops; from one to 12 years, from 5 to 12 drops. Persons from twelve to twenty-five years, 12 to 25 drops; from twenty-five to forty five and over, 15 to 60 drops. As a purgative the dose for a strong and healthy adult is from 90 to 100 and even 120 drops.

DR. AUGUST KÖENIG'S BREAST TEA.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE—In an earthen teapot or other covered vessel put a teaspoonful of the tea with two or three cups of boiling water, and let it "draw" for several hours; then pour it through a strainer and drink while hot a teaspoonful before retiring in the evening and another in the morning on getting up. For children, proportionately less. In cases where this fails to produce the desired effect, the above dose should be taken more frequently, or increased as occasion may require. It may be sweetened to suit the taste.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT—Dr. August Kœnig's Hamburg Breast Tea is put up and sold in original packages only, costing but 25 cents and is never sold by weight, either by the pound or in less quantities.

DR. AUGUST KœNIG'S HAMBURG PLASTER

an excellent remedy for sores, felons, boils, abscesses, itch, scrofulous sores, flesh wounds, eruptions, salt-rheum swelled breasts, sore breasts, sore nipples and swellings.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE—Spread the plaster on soft linen and apply to the affected parts. It causes no inconvenience, and will not soil the garments, and can be used with safety and satisfaction by the most delicate person.

It is not given to one human being to know all things, and the more he knows of different matters, the more superficial is his knowledge. Our Creator has thus circumscribed our intellectual powers, to bind us together. We are forced to lean on each other, and for what we do not know, we are obliged to go to those who do know, and when we receive that knowledge we take it upon faith, not doubting but that those who have devoted their time to a particular subject understand it. We must in the very nature of things depend upon each other. If we want a house built we do not go to a doctor to do the work, but to masons, carpenters and others who understand how to do it. On the other hand, who would think of going to a carpenter to set a broken bone, or to cure us when we are sick? We admit that there are many who have mistaken their avocations, but it does not follow that all men are ignorant of what they profess to know.

The wise doctors of this day have learned this fact, and they have used the knowledge of the chemist and others to perfect themselves in the art of healing the sick.

There is no art, no profession, that has made such wonderful progress as the science of curing the sick. The doctors of this day have learned one very important fact in relation to their profession, and that is, that nature herself is the greatest doctor. No sooner is there anything wrong with the human system than nature sets at work to restore it to a healthy condition, and so long as medicine is given to assist her, that medicine is good, but the moment a doctor attempts to thwart nature in her efforts to throw off disease, that moment he does incalculable injury. By long study, aided by fortuitous accidents, the physiology of the human body is much better understood than when doctors who were called upon to relieve the sick began by letting blood, and purging the system, to take away the strength, which nature needed to combat the disease. If doctors practised now, as they did a few years ago, they would be convicted at least of manslaughter, perhaps murder; indeed it is not a rare event to read of some physicians being tried for malpractice.

We are much wiser, friends, in our present age than were many of the physicians of fifty years ago. At this day, our children are educated in Physiology, and the person nowadays who arrives at maturity without more knowledge of the human system than was possessed by the doctors of the past decade, must be ignorant indeed.

We have said this much by way of preface, to introduce to you our proprietary medicines, St. Jacobs Oil, Dr. Aug. Koenig's Hamburg Remedies, Dr. Worthington's Cholera and Diarrhoea Medicine and Diamond Vera Cura for Dyspepsia. These remedies are compounded upon the principles of correct assimilation, and in some diseases, two or more of them may be needed to assist nature to restore our organs to health.

As we have said before, the causes of disease are few, and upon their first inception, may oftentimes be removed by simple remedies, but if allowed to run on, the most direful effects may result. The wise people will note what our remedies have done for others. Read our testimonials, and if you are afflicted in any way like those who have written them, you cannot do better than to make a trial of them.

Indigestion—40 Years.

Pacific, Mo., U. S. A., July, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—I cheerfully bear testimony to the fact that your Diamond Vera Cura is the first relief I have found for Indigestion and eructation of food, with which I have suffered for 40 years, and can therefore recommend it as a highly valuable remedy for such complaints.

Yours respectfully,

GEORGE C. CURRY,

Postmaster and Proprietor "American House."

DIRECTIONS.—Immediately after eating, take one of the Lozenges, and continue to chew for at least an hour, swallowing the saliva. Remaining gum should then be thrown away and not swallowed.

Substitute for Tobacco.

Smithheld, N. C. U. S. A., May 13, 1885.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co. Baltimore, Md.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to certify that I have used one box of Diamond Vera Cura, your Dyspepsia cure. It did me more good than any medicine I have ever tried for indigestion. It is also a splendid substitute for tobacco. I will want more in the near future. Very respectfully,

REV. R. POPE
